EQUIPPING THE NEXT GENERATION OF MISSIONARY AVIATORS

Missions Context: Students work at Moody

It's October again at Moody Aviation which means all our students and instructors are putting in long hours to get everyone trained up in cross country flying and high performance aircraft endorsement. These days are dynamic and can be very intense. The lessons these students are learning are essential for them to practically serve as pilots in an overseas missionary context. While flying in the US is relatively simple due to the abundance of large, well-maintained runways, in the field, the precision and discipline the students learn at Moody makes all the difference for their safety.

My Development as a Flight Instructor

I just started my third year in my role as flight instructor with Moody. Because of the experience I have gained, I am now qualified as a proctor for a number of different flight tests. Not only do I get the chance to meet and pray for more of our students this way, I also have the privilege of revisiting students I had taught in the past. Seeing them work their way from just learning the basics in a simulator to flying in actual aircraft is incredible.

Spiritual growth.

Each day, I watch the Lord do amazing work in these students. Through the difficulty and stress of our training procedures, God's healing sanctification shines through. I am reminded that this spiritual growth is the most important outcome of their time at Moody. I know that even from my experience, if I never had the chance to touch an airplane again, my time as a student at Moody was more than worth the effort due to the incredible growth in my walk with the Lord. It is such a joy to see God moving in my students' lives the same way he moved in mine and an honor to be a part of the process.

Grace's opportunities to guide clients by developing their relationship with God.

I (Grace) have re-entered the workforce after three months at home with Daniel, which has been a blessing but also a difficult adjustment. Despite the distress at being away from the baby, it has been encouraging for me to see God work in the hearts of my clients to pull them closer to Him. The Holy Spirit has guided my work and given opportunities to encourage clients to lean into spiritual development. Watching the Lord start to reveal himself to my clients is incredibly humbling and just plain awesome.

Daniel's development.

Daniel is just about five months old now and we feel like he changes every day. He just got his first two teeth and is chewing on everything! He is also close to being able to sit up on his own. We are starting to feel more adjusted to life as parents and are learning rhythms and systems to manage our responsibilities better without becoming overwhelmed. We are seeing God work in new ways to grow us to meet our challenges, build our trust in His provision, and teach us more about His unconditional love for us.

Thank you so much for being a part of our team and we hope that you are encouraged by seeing how the Lord uses your generosity and prayers to further His kingdom.

Aviation. How we sustain ministry at the ends of the earth.

Praying.

Moody Ministry.

The students at Moody are starting to decide where their families will serve upon graduation. Please pray for clear pathways toward God's plan for them and few barriers to get started.

Please also pray for me to have wisdom in instructing my students as well as increased reliance on the Lord because I know that He is who my students need most.

Therapy.

Please pray for endurance for Grace to continue working hard at work and at home. Pray also for Grace to heed the Holy Spirit's guiding hand when helping her clients.

Family.

Please continue praying for us to practice relying on the Lord and the church for support during a stressful season.

Please also pray for more individuals and churches we can share our ministry with who may want to join our support team.
